Aromatherapy for the four legged in the familyBy Denniger BoltonWe use essential oils in our family preferring using them to taking commercial type medicines and when I saw this book by Sheryl Lewis about how to safely use essential oils for dogs, I had to get it. I had heard that a dog owner had to be wary of using them on pets. The author states that this is the case. Some oils are harmful and even dangerous, but she points out the oils that are beneficial for treating various maladies such as fleas, ear mites, ticks, skin disorders and infections and internal parasites, list under each an essential oil based remedy. The homemade flea collar made with a favorite bandanna and flea killing comb are great ideas and can be put to use immediately with the added benefit - its cheaper and better for the dog than buying a collar at the pet store. Be sure and read this book before you use these oils on your pets. For instance lavender is good for dogs but not for cats.4 of 4 people found the following review helpful. great tips and oils ressources !By samir taiebI Really enjoyed reading this book , it helps pet owners do figure out which oils are the best and the difference between them , when to use them etc... , i like the fact that Sheryl Louis add pictures to make the reading more enjoyable ,also a lot of advices are given in this book , i would have love to have a little bit longer !2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. A real value!By Beran ParryThis book is quite interesting and has a practical value for me. The writer goes over all of the basics of using your own essential oils and provides a short primer on carrier bases There is a lot of information about the basics of essential oils and how to use them for dog deodorizers, flea fighters, skin soothers, and nose protectors, changing the behavior of the dog. I couldnt even imagine that I would be able to use oils in so many cases for dogs. So this book was an invention for me. I cant wait to try what I have read from this book. I was amazed to learn that essential oil therapy is being recommended by many vets because it is a natural therapy for revitalizing, detoxifying and even has antiseptic properties.
